Dear Marvel Team,

please allow me to introduce myself: I am the Lord Mayor of the City of Memmingen in Bavaria, Germany – a place you may not have visited yet, but one that might already look... surprisingly familiar.

As a long-time admirer of the worlds you create, I was particularly intrigued by your recent portrayal of Latveria. Because we couldn't help but notice: Doomstadt seems to have taken some architectural inspiration from our very own Town Hall.

While we are, of course, deeply honored that even a sovereign nation ruled by Doctor Doom appreciates good design, allow me to gently add one small detail:

Memmingen is Germany's City of Freedom Rights.

In 1525, the "Twelve Articles" were written here – widely regarded as Europe's earliest declaration of human rights. So while Latveria may in Dr. Dooms opinion be efficient, stable, and impressively governed, we like to believe that our version of history took a slightly more... participatory turn.

That said, I must confess: your vision of Doomstadt has sparked some ideas on our side. I have already begun to wonder whether our Town Hall might benefit from a subtle upgrade – perhaps a few Doombots, a dramatic throne room, or at least a more cinematic lighting concept.

Which brings me to a proposal:

It would be a great honor for us to host the premiere of your next Marvel movie here in Memmingen – in the city that (unintentionally, of course) inspired Doomstadt.

Beyond that, we would love to explore a creative collaboration – for example:

- transforming our Town Hall into a temporary version of Doomstadt
- creating a visual “Doomstadt meets Memmingen” installation
- or bringing fiction and history together in a shared storytelling moment

Rest assured: any transformation into Doomstadt would be strictly temporary – our commitment to freedom remains non-negotiable.

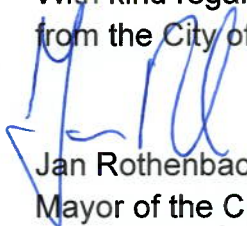

Because while Memmingen may not offer world domination, we do offer something equally powerful: open doors, open minds, and a genuine sense of lightness.

For one special occasion, however, we would be more than happy to explore a slightly darker, more dramatic version of ourselves.

I would be delighted to hear from you and explore whether fiction and reality might meet – in the most unexpected way.

With kind regards,

from the City of Freedom (and occasional multiverse overlap)

Jan Rothenbacher

Mayor of the City of Memmingen

P.S. Should Doctor Doom wish to attend personally, I would be happy to offer him a prominent place on our Town Hall balcony – purely for ceremonial purposes, of course.
